The ARCTURUS gallery will celebrate in June its 19 years of collaboration with Miguel MACAYA. During these years, we organized at the gallery 8 personal exhibitions, 5 thematic exhibitions, and presented it in a personal exhibition outside the walls and 4 fairs.

The notoriety of this Spanish painter has grown steadily, because of the singularity of his universe and his technique, each drawing its sources of traditional Spanish painting, while managing to be personal and contemporary.

His painting is a characteristic explosion of shadow and light, but especially of shadow: a dark and silent background beautifully worked with oil on wood, which accentuates the figurative power and sobriety of the work. He suggests mysterious stories, strange faces, silent and timeless still life, huge fruits that silhouettes try to hold like an airship.

This new exhibition by Miguel MACAYA will allow us to see a coherent set of works taking its way from recent years. We will welcome you with pleasure by appointment at a schedule of your choice to provide you with any additional information / material you may need.

... It is a painting of truth that ultimately it is. Macaya never says too much, never too little. His eye is sober. His still life obeys a concern for modesty that would reduce them to the purest if they did not come to inhabit their minds. The mind ? Yes, this same depth, this same intensity that we find also in the faces, and that we can call grace, or poetry, or the soul.

Daphné TESSON

... But since Goya, one can make use of a tenebrous painting. Or to put it better, painting light that refers to the night, just as (as in Francis Bacon) there is a form of painting that can be used to depict what is formless. When painting seems to emit light in order to attract our eyes to the shadows, then we are in the presence of something sublime. Miguel Macaya's painting draws one's gaze to the sublime precisely because without rejecting light, he makes us look at the dark side of the work : at what we cannot or will not see, the unknown background that he makes his figures look towards when they are turned away from us. You could say that in his most conspicuous pictorial referents, Miguel Macaya's canvases return oils that nobility that only they can claim : the dark of night, the infinite blackness, the blind reference to where all those questions that art based on light and colour can hardly answer.

Enrique LYNCH

...And then you have to see this work for real... You have to approach it, almost to the point of touching it. Feel all the poetry of this universe? This subtlety between the tones, these resonances between the objects represented ... Do you see these subjects which stand out against a purified background, without frills? Do you perceive the mystery that emanates from this painting ... This serene silence, as put in quotation marks, yes a kind of suspended time.

Ludovic DUHAMEL

...Miguel Macaya is an exceptional figurative painter since what he represents is never what appears. We see it and identify it, but we go immediately beyond; we enter the human problem through the lines of a zebra, a hollow plate with brushes and spatula, a penguin that emerges from the shadows ... Light and darkness are the face and the pile of the same vital currency that we all received at our birth and that we can not change despite all our efforts. This is why these paintings of Miguel Macaya require to be observed with a mind willing to confront the fact of finding oneself. And all thanks to the truth of painting.
